PROGRAM NOTES

Wednesday Afternoon, October 30, 1963

at 5:15 o'clock

Lasciate Averno - Luigi Rossi, 1647

This lamentation for his dead wife, Euridice, is sung by Orfeo at the entrance to Hades as he prepares to attempt to release her from the bonds of death.

Les Indes Galantes - Jean-Philippe Rameau, 1735

This Hymn to the Sun is sung by Huascar, an Inca priest of Peru at the time of the Spanish invasions: "O Sun, your altars have been destroyed, your only temple is now in our hearts and while we sing of the light and warmth you give, deign to share our praise with the god of love. Shining torch of the universe, all the elements resound with the glory of your name."

Don Giovanni "Serenade" - Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart

This ironical serenade is sung under the window of a chambermaid.

Standchen - Franz Schubert

In the stillness of the night a lover begs his beloved, with increasing fervor, to join him in the garden.

Mephistopheles' Serenade - Hector Berlioz

Mephistopheles replaces Faust beneath the window of Marguerite and sardonically advises her to listen to the pleas of her suitor only if they are accompanied by a wedding ring.

Serenade - Charles Gounod

"When you sing, love blossoms on your lips;
When you laugh, all suspicions vanish;
When you sleep by my side, I feel a heavenly happiness."

Songs and Dances of Death "Serenade" - Modeste Moussorgsky

On her balcony an ailing maiden breathes the comforting night air. Beneath her, Death, in the guise of a young knight, sings to her his serenade of love, finally enticing her to sleep forever in his arms.

Vergebliches Standchen - Johannes Brahms

In the cold night a bold suitor tries insistently, but unsuccessfully, to persuade his beloved to open her window.

Trois Ballades de Francois Villon - Claude Debussy, 1910

1 - Ballade from Villon to his love

"False loveliness, costing a heavy price;
hard as a rock, though it seems soft and fair;
cry it aloud, a captive bound am I.
Love like a thief, that steals on one unseen,
pitiless eyes, that calmly view their work:
It is enough: release a tortured soul."

- 2 - Ballade written by Villon at his mother's request, as a prayer to the Virgin Mary

"Lady of Heav'n, of Purgatory Empress,
Queen of earth and of all things here below,
Virgin, receive a humble Christian woman,
count me amongst Thy chosen and elect.
Well do I know I am nothing alone.
Thy graciousness, Oh Virgin, Lady and Mother, is by far greater than my sins unnumbered.
without Thy help not one can hope to mount the starry skies. Lady, well do I know it, and in this faith will I love her, and die...!"

- 3 - Ballade of the Ladies of Paris

"Although 'tis said the ladies of Florence and of fair Venice, babble sweetly, yet I trow that their sweetness lieth.
But, whether Lombards or Romans or Genovese, their speech lacketh charm (and Fiedmontese);
Prince, give the merry ladies of Paris
the prize for speech, supreme their charm.
In spite of all that's said of others,
Parisian ladies must bear the palm!"

L'Horizon Chimerique - Gabriel Faure, 1922

Poem by J. de La Ville de Mirmont

- 1 - The sea is boundless, and my dreams are crazy.
The sea sings under the sun and bangs on the cliffs,
And my light dreams dance on the sea like drunken birds.
They play in the wake of the vessels
Which my heart, in their flight, is following.
The lost seagulls will mistake them for one of their own.
- 2 - I have boarded a vessel which tosses and rolls.
My feet have forgotten the paths of the earth.
I want but the sea and the wind,
To rock me like a child in the cradle of the waves.
Outside the harbor, now but a fading image,
The tears of farewell no longer sting my eyes.
Oh, my sorrow, my sorrow, where have I left you?
- 3 - Diana, Selenae, moon of polished metal,
I resent your limpidity and your indifference.
And my heart, always weary and always disturbed,
Longs for the peace of your nocturnal light.
- 4 - Vessels, I will have loved you in vain,
The last of you all has left for the sea.
The sunset carried away so many open sails
That my heart and this harbor are deserted forever.
I am one whose desires are on earth,
The breeze that enchants you fills my heart with fright.
But your call, from the depths of the evening, makes me despair,
For great desires of departure are unfulfilled in me.

Don Quichotte a Dulcinee - Maurice Ravel, 1932
Poems by Paul Morand

Chanson romanesque

If you were to tell me that the earth displeases you by turning so, I should dispatch Panza and you would see it fixed and quiet.

If you were to tell me that you are bored with the heavens' being so full of stars, rending the Divine Order I should reap them with one stroke from the sky.

If you were to tell me that Space thus emptied displeases you, like a God-knight I'd come, lance at the ready and scatter the stars on the passing wind.

But if you were to say that my life belongs more to me than to you, I should pale beneath that reproach and I should die blessing you. Oh, Dulcinea!

Chanson epique (dedicated to Martial Singher)

Good Saint Michael, who gives me leave to see my lady and to hear her; good Saint Michael, who deigns to choose me to please and defend her; good Saint Michael, pray descend with Saint George to the altar of the Madonna of the Blue Mantle.

With a ray from heaven bless my sword and her who in purity and piety as in modesty and chastity - my lady (oh, great Saint George and Saint Michael) - the angel who watches over my vigil, my sweet lady so like you, Madonna of the Blue Mantle.

Chanson a boire (Drinking song)

To hell with the bastard, illustrious lady, who to make me lose favor in your sweet sight says that love and old wine put my heart and soul in mourning!

Oh! I drink to joy! Joy is the only goal towards which I go straight after I've....after I've drunk! Ha! Ha! Ha! I drink to joy!

To hell with the jealous one, dark mistress, who whines, weeps and preaches - always a pallid lover who mixes water with his drunkenness. Ah! I drink to joy! Joy is the only goal towards which I go straight after I've....after I've drunk!

SCENES FROM OPERAS

(An Open Class of the Opera Workshop)

Friday Afternoon, February 28, 1964

5:15 o'clock

I

Werther.....Jules Massenet

Act III, Scenes 1 and 2

The scene is in Weimar, Germany at the beginning of the 19th Century.

Charlotte.....Mary Ann Miller
Sophie.....Patricia Howatt

Charlotte, married for some months to a man her mother had chosen on her deathbed, is fighting her growing affection for the poet Werther who pursues her with ardent love. The day before Christmas she reads once more his letters - he had promised that by then he would either have cured himself of his love or have committed suicide. Charlotte's young sister, Sophie, herself secretly in love with Werther, tries to comfort her in her anxiety.

II

Manon Lescaut.....Giacomo Puccini

Act IV

The scene is in America, middle of the 18th Century.

Manon.....Barbara Haspel
Chevalier Des Grieux.....Roy Neal

Deported from France on moral charges, Manon and her faithful lover Des Grieux have sought refuge in the wilderness of Louisiana. Overcome by grief, remorse and exhaustion, with all hope for help lost, Manon dies in the arms of her beloved Chevalier.

III

Les Contes d'Hoffmann.....Jacques Offenbach

Act III

The scene is in Munich, middle of the 19th Century.

Antonia, an ailing young woman.....Alice Brady
Crespel, her father.....William Workman
Franz, his old servant.....Jonathan Rigg
Hoffmann, a poet in love with Antonia...Roy Neal
Doctor Miracle.....James De Haven
The voice of Antonia's mother....Mary Ann Miller
Nicklausse, a friend of Hoffman.....Daniel Eby

In her father's house in Munich, Crespel's daughter Antonia, doomed to die of consumption, sings nostalgically of her absent lover Hoffmann. Her dead mother had been a famous singer but such a career is forbidden to her ailing daughter. The worried father tries to keep away from Antonia both her lover and Dr. Miracle, the physician responsible for the mother's early death. However his servant, the old Franz, deaf and beset by artistic delusions, admits Hoffmann into the house and later, the dreaded Doctor Miracle himself. The latter, an evil magician, summons Antonia, then invisible, for a medical checkup, whereupon he conjures up the ghost of her mother, who, appearing to the delirious girl, incites her to sing again. Miracle drives her into a frenzied singing obsession until she dies of exhaustion in the presence of her helpless father and lover.

The Curtis Institute

The Curtis Institute of Music was founded in 1924. Its founder was Mary Curtis Zimbalist. The school was founded with the dedication to the following principles: to hand down through contemporary masters the great traditions of the past, and to teach students to build on this heritage for the future.

The Curtis Institute has a student body enrollment of approximately 120 young musicians, and graduates about 20 each year. Graduates in the past forty year history have included: Leonard Bernstein, Gian-Carlo Menotti, Samuel Barber, Anna Moffo, and Susan Starr.

Selection of incoming students is conducted by a system of auditions, and in the case of foreign applicants by tape recordings. Once accepted the students attend Curtis on a scholarship basis only.

Individuals that have taught and are presently teaching at Curtis included: Rudolf Serkin, Fritz Reiner, Josef Hoffman, Efrem Zimbalist, Sr., Leonard Rose, and Lea Lubasehutz.

Immaculata Glee Club

The Glee Club of Immaculata College has remained an integral part of campus activity for nearly half a century. This choral society offers to qualified students from all departments of the college the opportunity of cultural enrichment through the performance of representative vocal literature. Within itself the group contains a few special ensembles including the Madrigal Singers and the College Choir. Included in recent group activities are broadcasts, recordings, performances in the Philadelphia area, and participation in the National Catholic Music Educators' Convention at Washington, D. C. These singers who perform under the direction of distinguished guest conductors are trained by the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, who staff Immaculata, a liberal arts college for women.

THE VILLANOVA SINGERS

The impetus for founding the Villanova Singers came in 1953 from Harold Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School of Villanova University. Dean Reuschlein directed the Singers until 1957, when he was succeeded by Herbert Fiss, a successful college choral director. Rev. Edward C. Doherty, O.S.A., energetic moderator of the Singers, provides the administrative direction for the club.

Last season, for the first time, the Singers included several mid-western concerts on their itinerary, traveling 4000 miles and singing in New York, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Chicago.

As part of this season's equally ambitious schedule, the Singers presented an Easter Sunday concert to a nation-wide audience over the Mutual Broadcasting System. In addition to presenting several concerts in both the Philadelphia and New York areas, the club has traveled to Boston and Washington and is conducting another mid-western tour this season commencing April 15, presenting concerts in Columbus, Toledo, Chicago and Detroit.

Program notes for The Marriage of Figaro

First performance of the play by Beaumarchais:

Paris, April 27, 1784

First performance of the Mozart Opera:

Vienna, May 1, 1786

No better brief outline of the plot of the opera can be given than in the words of the author of the play. Here is a first draft, by Beaumarchais himself, of the story of Le Mariage de Figaro. It corresponds in almost every detail with da Ponte's libretto.

Program of Le Mariage de Figaro

Figaro, steward at the castle of Aguas Frescas, has borrowed ten thousand francs from Marceline, housekeeper of Dr. Bartolo, and has given her a note promising to repay the money at a certain time or to marry her if he should default. Meanwhile, very much in love with Susanna, Countess Almaviva's young chambermaid, he prepares to marry her: for the Count, himself enamored of young Susanna, has favored this marriage in the hope that a dowry he has promised to give her would enable him to obtain from her in secret her yielding to the droit du seigneur, a right that he had renounced for the benefit of his servants when he was married. This little domestic intrigue is conducted on behalf of the Count by the rather unscrupulous Basile, music-master of the castle. But the young and virtuous Susanna believes herself obliged to apprise her mistress and her betrothed of the Count's gallant intentions, and the Countess, Susanna and Figaro band together to foil the plans of the lord of the manor. A small page, beloved by everyone at the castle but mischievous and overheated, like all precocious lads of thirteen or fourteen, slips saucily away from his master and by his liveliness and perpetual thoughtlessness more than once involuntarily places obstacles in the way of the Count's progress, at the same time getting himself into hot water, which leads to some very effective incidents in the piece....The Count, finally perceiving that he is being made the victim, but unable to imagine how it is being done, resolves upon vengeance by favoring Marceline's claims. Thus, desperate because he cannot make the young woman his mistress, he tries to marry the old one to Figaro, who is distressed by all this. But at the moment when Almoviva believes himself avenged, when as first magistrate of Andalusia, he condemns Figaro to marry Marceline that day or pay the ten thousand francs - which Figaro cannot possibly do - it is revealed that Marceline is Figaro's unknown mother.

This ruins all of the Count's plans and he cannot flatter himself that he is either fortunate or avenged. During this time, the Countess, who has not given up the hope of winning back her unfaithful spouse by catching him at fault, has arranged with Susanna that the latter pretend to grant the Count a rendezvous at last in the garden, and that the wife appear there in place of the mistress. But an unforeseen incident apprises Figaro of the rendezvous granted by his fiancée. Furious because he believes himself deceived, he hides at the appointed spot in order to surprise the Count with Susanna. While he is still raging, he is himself pleasantly surprised to discover that the whole affair is only a game between the Countess and her chambermaid for the purpose of fooling the Count; he finally joins in the game good-humoredly; Almoviva, convicted of unfaithfulness by his wife, throws himself at her feet, begs her forgiveness, which she laughingly grants him, and Figaro marries Susanna.

I. Samson et Dalila (in French) C. Saint-Saëns

Scene from Act II

Dalila Mary Lou Falcone
High Priest of Dagon Edward Crafts

Place: Gaza, Palestine.

Time: 1136.B.C.

Synopsis: Samson, the leader of the Israelites, has revolted against the Philistines and taken possession of the city of Gaza. Dalila, although a Philistine, has become his mistress. In the present scene, Dalila in the garden of her country house awaiting Samson's visit, sings an invocation to the god of love to give her the strength to punish the man she pretends to love. The High Priest of the Philistines come to Dalila and, reminding her of the ordeal of her brethren, tries by several arguments to rally her to their camp only to hear from Dalila that her love for Samson is false and that she will trap him by her wiles and bring about his downfall. The two Philistines sing a resounding duet of hatred and revenge.

II. Faust Charles Gounod

Act III, 3rd Tableau

Mephistophéles Ronald Nadeau
Faust. Roman Osadchuk
Valentin Evans Clough
Marguerite Dianna Ross
Siebel Carla Wilkins
Villagers . . Members of the Opera Class

Place: A public square

Synopsis: Dr. Faust, rejuvenated by the devil Mephisto, has seduced the young Marguerite and then forsaken her. His infernal guide now brings him back to Marguerite's house where he is confronted by her brother Valentin who challenges him to a duel to revenge the honor of his sister. With the help of Mephisto Faust wounds the valiant Valentin who dies cursing his sister.

III. Don PasqualeG. Donizetti

Act I, Finale

Norina Janet Perry
Doctor Malatesta Edward Crafts

Place: Boudoir of Norina

Synopsis: To the wealthy and aging bachelor Don Pasquale his adviser Malatesta has offered a bride, the young and pretty Norina. We now see her in her boudoir reading a romantic novel and finding herself well-versed in the art of amorous conquest. Her own lover Ernesto writes to her that he is leaving town. But Dr. Malatesta reassures her on that matter and gives her a lesson on how to catch Don Pasquale in the bonds of matrimony - a mock marriage, which will provide her with the money she needs for marrying Ernesto.

IV. Werther (in French) Jules Massenet

Act III, Part I

Charlotte Carla Wilkins
Sophie. Pamela Boodley
Werther Patrick Calleo
Albert Daniel Eby

Synopsis: Weinmar, the day before Christmas in 1770. Charlotte, after devoting her youth to raising her younger, orphaned brothers and sisters, has married her childhood friend, Albert. In spite of that marriage, the young poet, Werther, has fallen desperately in love with Charlotte. Fearing to be moved by his love, Charlotte has ordered him to stay away for some months and has set the date of Christmas for his decision to return as a friend or to renounce ever to see her again. Reading Werther's letters once more, she understands that his failure to return would mean that he has decided to die. In vain, her sister Sophie tries to cheer her. Werther arrives. Containing their passion for awhile, they finally submit to it, momentarily and then separate. Later, when Albert returns home, he receives a message from Werther asking for the loan of his pistols. The loan is made. Werther has chosen to die.

Friday Afternoon, January 28, 1966 at 5:15 o'clock

I. La Traviata G. Verdi

Act II, Scene 2

Violetta Nancy Wertsch
Giorgio Germont Daniel Eby

Synopsis: Leading a life of ceaseless enjoyment, although afflicted with a grave illness, Violetta has fallen in love for the first time with the young Alfredo Germont. Alfredo's father, fearing that his son is being lured to his ruin, comes to visit the dangerous courtesan in an effort to induce her to release his son. He finally convinces the kind hearted Violetta to make this cruel sacrifice for the good of the young man and of his family. He leaves Violetta alone and desperate although she has won his respect and affection.

II. Manon Lescaut G. Puccini

Act IV

Manon Alice Brady
Des Grieux Patrick Gallo

Place: In America, middle of the 18th Century.

Synopsis: Deported from France on moral charges, Manon and her faithful lover Des Grieux have sought refuge in the wilderness of Louisiana. Overcome by grief, remorse and exhaustion, with all hope for help lost, Manon dies in the arms of her beloved Chevalier.

III. Le Jongleur de Notre Dame. J. Massenet

Act II, Scene 2

Jean Pamela Boodley
Boniface Edward Crafts

Synopsis: In this opera the soprano impersonates a teen-age boy, Jean (French for John), an errant "Juggler" minstrel, tumbler, dancer all in one, who earns his poor life by performing in the streets. Because he was playing his very pagan act on the steps of a convent chapel, Jean was harshly scolded by the the Prior. His frailty and innocence has moved the monk to take him into the convent and give him some moral and religious instruction. In this scene we see Jean despairing of ever being worthy of the love of the Holy Virgin for which he longs ardently. The convent's cook, Brother Boniface, tells him The Legend of the Sage: fleeing from Herod's murderers, Mary looks for a place to hide her infant son. A rosebush would have been ideal, but the conceited rose refuses to help. A humble sagebush does provide shelter and salvation. Jean understands that Mary loves the humble soul, too, and offers her his heart.

IV. Don Carlo (in Italian) G. Verdi

Act IV, Part I

King Filippo I	Ronald Nadeau
Grand Inquisitor	Evans Clough
Queen Elisabetta	Dianna Ross
Princess Eboli	Katherine Stone
Rodrigo di Posa	Daniel Eby
Conte di Lerma	Patrick Calleo

Synopsis: King Filippo II of Spain meditates in his study. His second wife Elisabetta of France, has never loved him. Life is lonely, his power and his honor are threatened. Only after death will he find peace. To the head of the powerful Inquisition, a blind 90 year old man, Filippo talks about the political plots of Don Carlo his son by his first marriage and heir to the throne. The two men decide that the rebellious son must be condemned to death. The Inquisitor denounces another traitor more dangerous than Carlo; Carlo's friend Rodrigo di Posa, himself, a confident of the King. The Inquisitor retires after asking the death penalty for Rodrigo. Queen Elisabetta enters crying for justice. Someone in her own court has stolen her casket of jewels. The King produces the casket which contains, along with the jewels, a portrait of Carlo. The innocent Queen, who had loved Carlo before her marriage to Filippo, defies the King, who brutally accuses her of adultery. She faints. Answering the King's call for help, Posa and Princess Eboli, lady-in-waiting, rush in. The quartet express various feelings; Eboli's remorse at having betrayed the Queen; Rodrigo's desire to free men from tyranny; the King's belief in his wife's innocence; the loneliness of the Queen. Alone with the Queen, Eboli confesses her guilt, her secret love for Carlo, her jealousy of the Queen, even her affair with the King. Coldly, the Queen orders her to a convent, and retires. The distracted Eboli curses the fatal gift of her beauty, then rushes to save Carlo.
